SHARE PUBLISHED WORKS QUICKLY

Organizations in the Financial, Banking and Investment fields rely on being able to share published works quickly. Sharing that content responsibly should be an important part of your day-to-day operations. With the Access for Business copyright licence, the work of securing permission each time you want to share critical information such as today's stock-market news, accounting updates and market perspectives can be taken care of so you can focus on what you do best: analyze, innovate and communicate.

PROTECTING YOUR EMPLOYEES

In Canada, copyright is an automatically arising form of protection for an original work that is fixed in any form; for example, an article published on a website. Using a copyright-protected work created by someone else requires permission from the copyright holder. This includes when your employees share critical content such as emailing a news clipping to a colleague, including a data table in a presentation or posting a research article to your company intranet or storage system.

Access for Business gives your employees the power to easily share and copy relevant print and digital articles, tables and charts across all your locations globally without the worry of inadvertent copyright infringement, including content from journal articles, newspapers, magazines and more.

Through Access Copyright's agreements with key financial publishers like Thomson Reuters and LexisNexis, copyright permissions can be pre-cleared so you can share content vital to your organization from:

- Key journals such as Accounting Perspectives, Contemporary Accounting Research, Journal of Financial Economics and more
- Newspapers and magazines from Canada and around the world
- Industry studies, graphs, tables, data, competitive market analysis and much more
